his home, and, it is supposed by his wife, went South. Mrs. Wackerle went to St. Louis in pursuit of him, and from there to Tgxzs, where she believed he had gone. At Shreveport, Louisiana, she got information, she said, that the year previous, a man had been killed on the Tgxzs & Pacific Railroad by being run over by a train of cars nine miles from that city. Assuming that it was her husband, she set herself at work to procure evidence to that effect. She was furnished blanks indicating what was necessary to establish his identity and death. In February, 1874, she visited Hartford, with the "proofs of death." They were found to be incomplete and unsatisfactory, and an investigation seemed necessary. Two affidaylis were furnished identifying the party killed as Wackerle, but they were found to have been made by ignorant freedmen. In one the party is made to say that "on the 25th of December, 1872, a man by the name of William Wakerle, well known to the deponent, having worked with him on Section 2 of the Texas & Pacific Railroad, was killed by being run over by the freight train;" "" "" and, further, that he saw said Wackerle after his death, and knows him to have been the same person whom he knew alive by that name." The other freedmen made affidavit in proofs furnished by Mrs. Wackerle. That on the 25th of December, 1872, one William Wackerle, a laborer on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, was killed at a place about nine miles from the city of Shreveport, by being run over by a train of the Texas and Pacific Railway Co; that he was present and saw said William Wackerle, deceased, when his body was sent to Shreveport, La., for cornore's inquest and interment; that he has frequently heard the deceased spell his name W-cc k-cr-le to deponent. This party subsequently said under oath that he did not know the name of the man killed; that he could not spell his own name; that the sfifdavit purported to have been made by him was not itrue; that it was never read to him, or was he awore; that his ignorance had been taken advantage of in procuring it; that he soly intention was to swear to the fact of a man having been killed. The critificate of death and burial gave the name of the deceased as "unknown." Mrs. Wackerle has also furnished several affidavits in which the parties state a man was killed on the above date, and they have since heard, or have been led to believe, it was William Wackerle. The delivery of iron is to begin immediately, and as soon as the bridges over Wegee are completed, which will be in a few days, track-laying will begin, and continue at the rate of two miles per week, until the road is completed to Armstrong's Mills. The Company has contracted for another locomotive and several cars which will be delivered, at an early day. There now seems to be no doubt that the road will be completed to Armstrong's by October 1st at the farthest. PUBLIC CAUTION.

be just what he had represented. A letter from Wackerle, dated in Jannary, 1878, and written in California, was shown, in which be said he left his wife at Quincy, Ill., because he was afraid she would kill him if he lived with her longer; that she had extorted everything from him—his land, cash, policies of insurance and exterted out to secape further misery and extortion. He did not know of his wife's whereabouts, and made inquiries/concerning her. With this interesting disclosure new light was of course thrown upon the case, and the adjuster took Mr. Weinmann to California, and there Wackerle was found alive and well. Fortunately two other Germans—John Hein and J. Nicholas Hein—who had lived in Carver, Minn., and who were ummbers of Lieutenant Weinmann's company with Wackerle, were tound there also, so that there was every opportunity for a complete identification.
